

4 Steps to Manage the Covid-19 Crisis at Your Nonprofit Organization

A Note from our Founder, Chantal Sheehan

Here we are. April 2020 and working our way through a global pandemic. March seemed like the longest month in history. April probably will, too.

So while you're staying home and working out what's next for you and your nonprofit, here are some thoughts on how to manage the next several weeks thoughtfully, fairly, and with a mindset of stewardship and sensitivity to all involved.

We don't know yet what our new normal will look like, but we can still approach this strange and unforeseen situation with equity, transparency, and strategy.

Here are my suggestions on how to do that \(link to full article\)

Cybercriminals and hackers know there's no better time to strike than during a global crisis. While you are distracted and spending your time trying to make sense of this new normal, they are finding new ways that they can steal your data and passwords, compromise your private information and even demand large ransoms.
